ONE YEAR AFFEH.

A year ago to-day the first set of real war in the Russo-Japanese conflict took place, when at midnight on February 8, 1904, the Japanese torpsio-boars attacked the Russian squadron in the outer reads of Port Arthur. For twelve months the war has now been waged and the end as yet is, to all appearances, very far off. Meanwhils the whole world protracted fighting entails. All war is borrible, and no one expected that two great military Fowers, such as Russia and Japan, would meet in the shock of battle without there being a terrible butcher's bill. The pride of both nations, the honor of both, are engaged in this quarrel. Russia had bestridden the Far East, as far as Manchuris was concerned, like a Colossus, and a very bestoring Colossus to boot. She despised Japan and contemned her sodiers as a heat of yellow segan dwarfs. Japan, on the other hand, paid Russia the better complinent of estrous and prolonged preparation. She perfected her nary and her army as fighting machines; she spied out the joints in her rival a narrour; she bent all her energies and all her genus upon securing the efficiency which she has so marvelloam the high seas. All her genus upon securing the efficiency which she has so marvelloam to the high seas. All her genus upon securing the efficiency which she has so marvelloam to the high seas. When We secure had not been also all the seasons of the heat of the season which control of the Pactic is fit to take its place among the natious which control world destinies. She has taught those who, like Great Britain, admired her before, to admire her theory, to admire her the more, while the rost regard her provess with profound people.
